PROBABLY A PLOT

Arranged by Anarchists to Blow the World's Fair Buildings Sky High.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 13.—The police here claim to have discovered evidence of a plot to blow up the water works at Chicago and then set fire to the World's fair buildings. They claim the letter was accidentally picked up at their headquarters over the saloon on East Genesee street. It introduces Sebastian Veromelski to Joseph Schultz, a leading Buffalo anarchist. Schultz denies that he knows anything about the letter or plot at which it hints. The letter which was written in German bears the date of April 29 and part of it translated reads as follows: "The hopes which I held out to you when last we met are about to be fulfilled and we shall look for assistance from you. This letter will introduce Sebastian Veromelski who will fully explain the assistance we need. He has complete plans of the water works mains from the mouth of the 'in take' pipe to the pumping station, also plans of the fair buildings." The police claim that the plot contemplates the blowing up of the water works so there can be no fire protection and then setting fire to the World's fair buildings. The police are of the opinion that the plot was arranged to avenge the death of the Chicago anarchists.

WORLD'S FAIR GROUNDS CHICAGO, May 13.—The action of the World's fair directory last night in deciding to open the gates of the fair to the public on Sunday beginning with Sunday, May 21, has caused a flutter among members of the World's Fair National Commission. They gathered in the assembly hall of their commission and discussed the matter. A good many expressed the belief that the directory had exceeded its authority and talked of getting an injunction to restrain the officials from permitting the directory to open the fair.

New Elections May be Necessary.

KANSAS CITY, May 13.—Star's Topeka special says Attorney General Little is receiving many letters from the mayor of cities and other officials inquiring about that provision of the new election law which requires all candidates to file a statement of election expenses. The letters express a desire to know if the writers can be ousted from office because of a failure to file a statement. Assistant Attorney General Allen says the law is very plain in its provisions and that any successful candidate can be ousted for failure to comply with them. Many successful candidates failed to file statements and it's expected that new elections will have to be held in many cities, especially the smaller ones.

The blow is a hard one to the young officer, but secretary Lamont has determined to revise, thoroughly and radically, the system of leaves of absence.

Not Afraid of Anarchists.

CHICAGO, May 13.—Assistant Superintendent Police Bremer takes no stock in the alleged discovery in Buffalo, New York, of a plot of anarchists to blow up the Chicago water works and set fire to the World's Fair buildings for revenge on account of the hanging of anarchists in 1887. It is the same old story, said he. We have no fear of its being carried out.

SHARP-WITTED COYOTES.

How Two of Them Tired Out a Jack Rabbit.

The coyote is a more intelligent sharp-witted beast than his big cousin, the gray wolf. It is stated by reliable eye-witnesses that the coyote, in order to secure a dinner of jack rabbit, and probably reasoning that one rabbit will make a meal for two wolves, enters into an arrangement with a brother coyote to join him in the hunt.

No wolf can singly run down a jack rabbit, and if the latter should run in a straight course no number of wolves could possibly catch it; but the rabbit nearly always runs in a wide circle, because it is its nature to return to its native slope or pasture. Accordingly one of the two coyotes hides himself near the spot where the chase begins, while the other pursues the rabbit at the top of his speed. Away they go, the rabbit gradually curving his course and finally coming back to the starting point, says the Philadelphia Times.

Now the tired coyote rests, and the fresh one springs out of hiding and takes his turn at swinging around the circle. If the rabbit has wind enough to outrun the second wolf, the first one takes another round, which is usually enough to wear out poor jack, and the coyotes have earned their dinner. It has been known to happen, though rarely, that the rabbit has left his circle and made a long, straight run, whereby the pursuers "got left."

But you must not infer from what has been said that the coyote is a slow runner; on the contrary, no dog except the greyhound and the famous Russian wolf hound can outrun him. Even after overtaking him no single dog could master the wolf, whose agility and fighting qualities are so well developed that the dog would soon retreat from the contest. I have known two powerful dogs to rush from our camp in Southern Texas and attempt to drive a coyote from its meal. It was a complete failure. There was a tremendous snarling and gnashing of teeth and soon two badly whipped dogs came sneaking back into camp, one of them severely bitten in the neck and shoulder. Three or four wolf hounds or Siberian bloodhounds could doubtless kill a coyote, but if less than six of them should unite against a big gray wolf they would all be glad to draw off before the wolf had been much hurt.

A Red Blot in History.

From 1791 to 1800, when warfare was almost continuous, 2,080,000 Frenchmen were successively called under arms. In 1890 only 677,598 remained. In ten years nearly 1,400,000 soldiers had disappeared. And this was only the republic's share. That of the consulate and empire far surpassed it. Napoleon's consumption of men is estimated at 2,000,000 by the most moderate statisticians, and at 3,000,000 by M. Richet in his most careful estimate. Broca and Thiers admit the loss of 1,000,000 of Frenchmen, the rest belonging, according to them, to the allies incorporated in the French armies. But the total remains the same. "It stands as a great red blot in the history." In the language of General Foy, "A man entered the military service at that time never to get out of it alive."—New York Sun.
